

RMAN - J

What is it?

It is Japan's only nation-wide professional association for those engaged in research management and administration. RMAN-J contributes to the promotion of science and technology and future innovation through the enhancement of the research capabilities of Japanese universities and research institutes.

Who are its members?

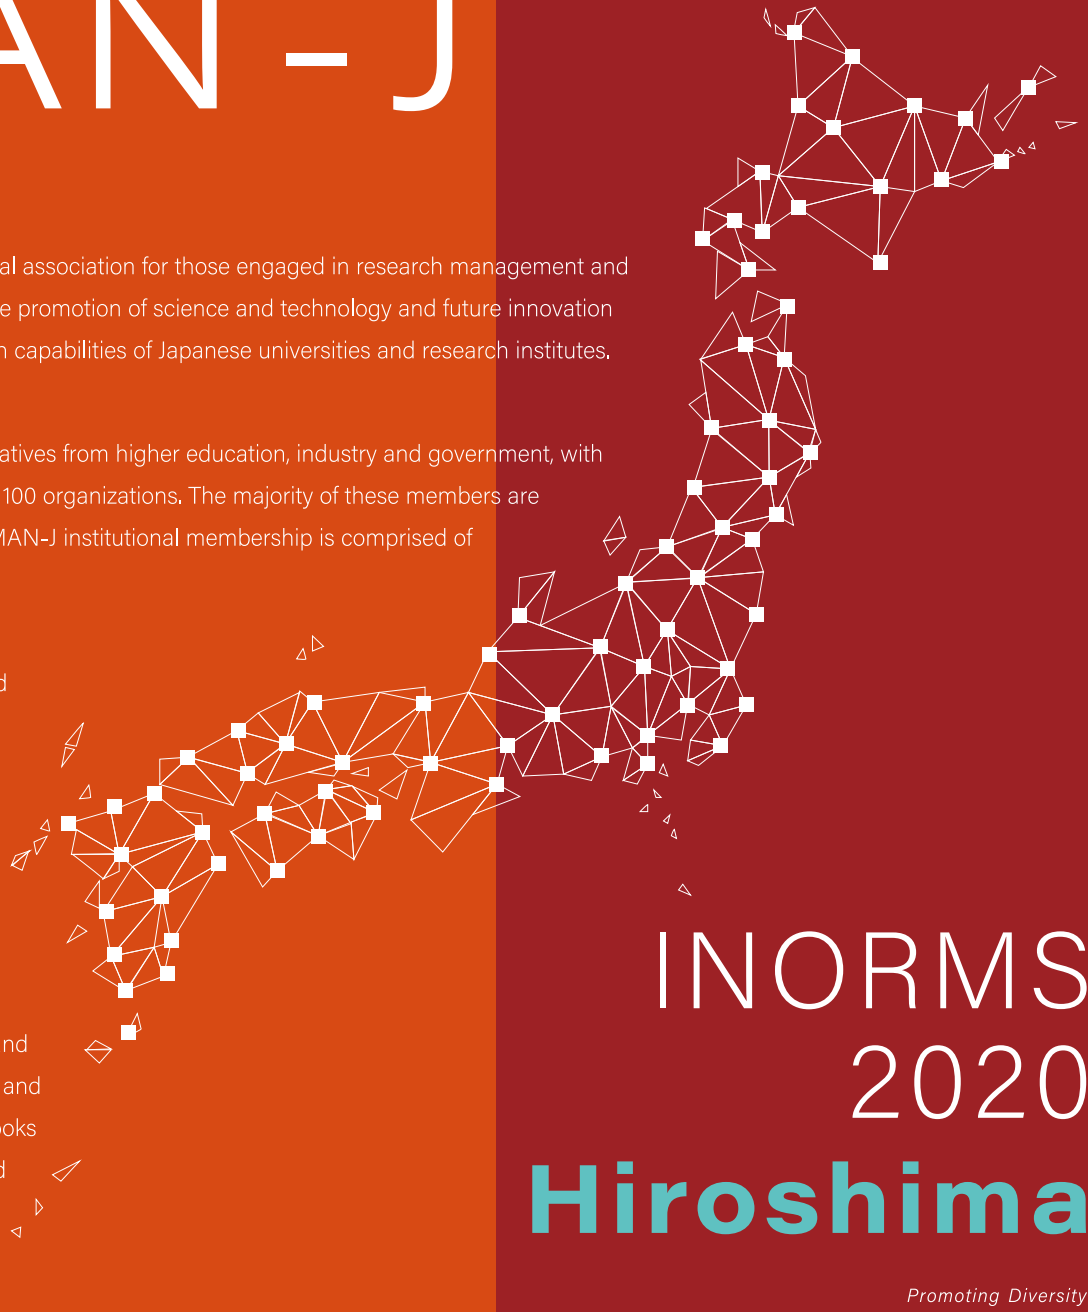

RMAN-J membership includes representatives from higher education, industry and government, with about 450 individual members from over 100 organizations. The majority of these members are directly linked to universities in Japan. RMAN-J institutional membership is comprised of 23 Japanese research institutes.

What has it done?

Since its inception in 2015, it has provided networking, dialogue and training opportunities for research managers and administrators (RMAs). This includes the promotion and organization of annual conferences held over the past three years.

What is it going to do?

Domestically, it aims to further promote and facilitate the RMAs' networking, dialogue and training opportunities. Internationally, it looks forward to welcoming RMAs from around the world by hosting the INORMS Congress in Hiroshima in May 2020.
